MUST GET LICENSE TO SELL MEAT IN CITY LIMITS

Ranchers and Farmers Subject to Ordinance If They Paddle Cuts to People in Town.

With the advent of steady cold weather numbers of ranchers and farmers in the vicinity of the city have begun slaughtering hogs, calves and hogs for sale in retail cuts to city residents. City Clerk Thomas Hughes announced today that all those who engage in the traffic are subject to the butcher's license law and must pay in accordance with the ordinance to lay themselves open to the penalty.

The ordinance is as follows: "Butchers selling at retail shall pay for each license for each year the sum of $25, payable quarterly, and every person whose business or occupation is to sell fresh beef, pork, or mutton shall be considered a butcher."

"The ordinance covers all those who sell meat in the city, even if it be the cuts from only one animal," said Mr. Hughes. "The license is payable quarterly, so that those who intend to slaughter and sell only during the winter months will have to pay but $6.25. The five cents additional is for issuing the license."

There are twenty butchers from whom Mr. Hughes collects license. It is to protect them from unfair competition as much as anything else that the authorities insist upon strict compliance with the license ordinance.

The sale of chickens and other fowls does not come under the ordinance.
